🧁Nat'l Chocolate Cupcake Day bugfixes

Cupcakes are known for being small, sweet bites. Is there a better metaphor for bug fixes? 😄

We recently fixed the following bugs:

- When the "Hide from article lists" box was checked for an article and a reader added that article to their Article Favorites, the article would display in the Favorites list in the table of contents but it wouldn't display in the Favorites Article List. We've updated the logic for the Favorites Article List merge code so it behaves the same as the table of contents.
- Also with Article Favorites: if the same reader had access to multiple knowledge bases and favorited articles in each knowledge base, the favorites list in one of the knowledge bases would be erased. We've fixed this so that a reader can properly favorite articles in multiple knowledge bases.
- File references: When a relative URL rather than the full Cloudfront URL was used for a file, that file reference was not captured. We've updated our reference-tracking logic to handle both full and relative URLs.
> 🦉 If you think you were impacted by this bug, you may need to resave the article or Style Settings where the relative URL was referenced, or contact us to have one of our support owls run a full reference reindex on your knowledge base!

- Since we added category icon background colors, we noticed that when you hover over a category icon panel, the background color slightly overlapped the category title, making it hard to see:

We've updated our styling here to provide a little more breathing room between the icon and the category title, which makes the category icon panels slightly taller than they are wide:

Category panel spacing before

Category panel spacing after

If you read this far down, please reward yourself with an actual ⬛chocolate 🧁cupcake or something else small and delightful if that's not quite your thing. You can say we told you to do it. ☺
