knowledgeowl

⊠ Nat'l Saxophone Day bugfixes

Last Modified on 11/05/2024 2:59 pm EST

Happy National Saxophone Day! A day that makes me wonder if other elder millennials can resist saying saxamophone, because I sure as heck can't.

I also would like to take this fine day to remind y'all that there's more to the sax than Kenny G, Lisa Simpson, and Clarence Clemons (all icons, to be sure.) Maybe today would be a nice time to try out some subtler sax, like the lovely layer brought to this gorgeous song I am so Happy with my Little Dog, thanks to Joseph Shabason. Enjoy!

1. If you've logged in since yesterday, you might have noticed some nicer colors, text styles and buttons across the app. We released a first round of prettifying improvements on Tuesday, and we hope you like them as much as we do. And of course, if you see any funny business as a result of these changes, please let us know!

2. We had a bug that was made PDFs come out blank if there were quotation marks in the title of the article. That's been fixed now, so you shouldn't see that happening again.

3. When you created your knowledge base, if the url had a special character in it (i.e. cariño.knowledgowl.com) the special character was just being dropped, instead of being replaced with its non-special counterpart. That is, it would be cario instead of carino. It could be easily changed in the same screen, but that definitely isn't a great experience in creating a new knowledge base. We fixed this, so there should no longer be any missing letters :)

4. The in-app left-hand navigation was broken when you were in the Custom PDF Edit area. That's been resolved now.